Research

I build computational systems that automatically learn how to solve problems. I'm especially interested in problems of human communication and understanding. The biggest barrier to worldwide communication is the fact that we speak many different languages. My research focuses on technology that will break this barrier, namely machine translation systems that learn how to translate from vast amounts of data (like Google Translate). Improvements to these systems depend on the extension and application of ideas from diverse fields such as algorithms, machine learning, formal language and automata theory, and computational linguistics. I am interested in variety of problems in these fields and others.
